

Schilt Publishing Gallery is proud to present an exhibition of Jane Hilton's America.

Jane Hilton, photographer and filmmaker, lives in London. She started out as a classical musician, graduating in 1984 with a BA (Hons) in Music and Visual Art from Lancaster University. Her love of photography brought her to London, working as an assistant for numerous fashion and advertising photographers, before going it alone in the late eighties. Jane first fell in love with the American landscape and culture in 1988 on a trip to Arizona; over 25 years later the love affair is still going strong. She has two books published by Schilt Publishing, Dead Eagle Trail and Precious. A selection of works from each series will be shown in this exhibition.

Dead Eagle Trail is a culmination of numerous road trips Jane Hilton has taken across the United States whilst documenting the American culture. This series is a celebration of the west, from the buckaroos of Nevada to the cowpunchers of Arizona. Cowboys are photographed in their own homes, surrounded by western artifacts. The need to hold onto their heritage is clearly visible. As the price of petrol and animal feed rises, the ranches struggle to survive and the cowboy of the twenty-first century could become extinct.

"Precious" is defined as something of "unique value" or someone "dear or beloved". What people consider as precious is entirely subjective though, as is of course beauty. Although prostitution is one of the oldest professions that have been made legal in Nevada, it is still not socially acceptable. Precious is a collection of intimate nude portraits of working girls and their stories.
